Welcome to Day Two of John Williams Week on IPR's Kids Commute - classical music for kids! This week, we're celebrating the work of legendary film composer John Williams.

Today, we'll hear music that's unforgettable to anyone who saw the 1982 science fiction fantasy, E.T. in a movie theater.

A note from Kids Commute Kate: I waited in line for about six hours - after being turned away when it was sold out! - to see this movie when I was a kid. I can't

“What is important is to give them the chance to discover whether classical concerts are a way they wish to be a part of something and provide enough opportunities to do so that the decision is not based on feeling out of place.”

Anna Knotts
